About Landrade of Austrasia

Her ancestry is controversial. No original source names her her parents but there is a theory she might have been a daughter of Charles Martel.

Settipani quotes an Aquitaine necrology which lists "Willelmus...pater eius Theodericus, mater Aldana soror Hiltrudis et Landradæ"[221]. He suggests that "Hiltrudis" was the wife of Odilo Duke of Bavaria, and therefore that all three sisters were daughters of Charles "Martel". The theory is attractive but not conclusive, as its validity depends on there being no other contemporary Hiltrudis, which is not provable. If it is correct, there is no indication about the mother of Landrada and Aldana. Hlawitschka highlights the case against the affiliation[222]. However, the evidence of the 25 May 765 charter, quoted below, suggests that Settipani's hypothesis may be correct.] same person as ...? LANDRADA . The Gesta Episcoporum Mettensis names "Chrodegangus antistes...ex pago Hasbaniensi oriundus, patre Sigamno, matre Landrada, Francorum ex genere primæ nobilitatis progenitus" as Bishop of Metz[223]. The co-identity between Landrada, wife of Sigamnus, and Landrada, supposed daughter of Charles "Martel" is suggested by the charter dated 25 May 765 under which "Grodegangus...archiepiscopus" [son of Sigamnus and Landrada] donated property "in pago Wormacensi...[et] in villa Dagosbeshen...in Hostoven, Burdus, in villa Flamersheim ecclesiam" to Gorze, with the consent of "Pipini...Francorum regis, avunculi mei"[224]. m SIGRAMNUS, son of ---.
